Tissue samples were taken from the spleens of six patients. Several islands of lymphoid tissue were microdissected from each, and samples of the HIV env gene were sequenced. The second column shows the average pairwise nucleotide diversity, p , within each island, and the third column shows the fraction of genetic variation between islands, F_{ST} . In patient M, there was no significant (n.s.) difference between islands, but in others, there was extensive divergence.
