

IN CONGRESS. JULY 4, 1776.

United States of America
Unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Prudence, in such a case, would dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that even the most ardent Wishes for Reform, in a long course of years, are but shallow and superficial, when compared with the more solid and settled Principles of the Human Mind.

That the United States have been long and peaceably united under the same Form of Government, is a fact which is not to be denied. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same arbitrary system of Government, has placed in the hands of one man the reins of power, and has by a series of concerted measures, endeavored to extend his tyranny, and has thus far advanced the art of destroying the Constitution, that a firm and resolute opposition is now being made, and a new Form of Government is being established, which will secure the Rights of the People, and preserve the Union.
