Reading Passage

NATURAL RESOURCES

A resource is something you can use to get what you need. If you need shelter, you can use wood to build a house. If you need food, you can use soil, water, and sunlight to grow crops. If you need to travel, you can use oil to power your car. These are examples of natural resources.

Natural resources are resources found in nature. They are not made by humans. Examples include sunlight, air, water, plants, animals, soil, stone, minerals, and fossil fuels. We use these to take care of our basic needs and survive. We even use natural resources to make other resources. For example, oil is a natural resource. We can't make oil. We have to take gasoline which powers our cars. Gasoline doesn't occur in nature in that form.

Some resources are renewable. Renewable resources have a never-ending supply of sunlight, air, and water. We use them over and over. Other resources are nonrenewable. Nonrenewable resources like oil, coal, and natural gas are limited. We can't make more of them. If we aren't careful, we can use them up.

Some countries have a lot of natural resources. For example, Saudi Arabia has a lot of oil. Norway has a lot of natural gas. Canada has a lot of timber. They also have forests full of trees.

Other countries don't have as many natural resources. For example, Japan has very little oil or coal. It has to get them from other countries.

Everyone needs natural resources to live. We need them to build houses, make food, and travel. We need to take care of our natural resources so we can use them for a long time.

cooperation between the Departments of Geography of the University of São Paulo, the University of Damascus and the University of Cambridge. It serves to refute the widely spread Malthusian paradigm which forecasts conflicts due to water scarcity by showing that this perspective has neither an empirical nor conceptual basis. It begins from the hypothesis that both sharing water politics and the use of technology can annul the water scarcity conflict paradigm. To corroborate this hypothesis, the book uses two variables illustrated by two contexts: the Euphrates River basin was utilised to study the first variable of the hypothesis sharing water and to show that agreements on international river basins have assured fair use of water by avoiding conflicts not only in the Middle East but also in the vast majority of international basins throughout the world The second context the Persian Gulf and Arab Peninsula was used to corroborate the second variable of the hypothesis the use of technology to assure water supply again not only in the Middle East but all over the world as well Princeton Review GED Test Prep, 2024 The Princeton Review,2023-07-25 Make sure you re studying with the most up to date prep materials Look for the newest edition of this title The Princeton Review GED Test Prep 31st Edition ISBN 9780593517888 on sale October 2024 Publisher s Note Products purchased from third party sellers are not guaranteed by the publisher for quality or authenticity and may not include access to online tests or materials included with the original product
