Cellular And Molecular Targets For Chemoprevention:

Cellular and Molecular Targets for Chemoprevention Vernon E. Steele, Gary D. Stoner, Gary J. Kelloff, Charles W. Boone, 1992-04-07 Cellular and Molecular Targets for Chemoprevention provides comprehensive coverage of target mechanisms that have proved valuable in chemoprevention research in addition to mechanisms that may prove valuable in the near future The book discusses such topics as growth factor receptor modulation cell to cell communication differentiation modulation antisense oligonucleotides tumor suppressor genes free radical scavengers and polyamine synthesis inhibition Cellular and Molecular Targets for Chemoprevention will be welcomed by scientists in all areas of cancer chemoprevention research pharmaceutical researchers and advanced students Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), 1992 First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965 70 Journal of the National Cancer Institute, 2003 Environmental Health Perspectives, 1993 Cancer Victor R Preedy, 2014-03-01 Cancer Oxidative Stress and Dietary Antioxidants bridges the trans disciplinary divide and covers in a single volume the science of oxidative stress in cancer and then the potentially therapeutic usage of natural antioxidants in the diet or food matrix The processes within the science of oxidative stress are described in concert with other processes such as apoptosis cell signaling and receptor mediated responses This approach recognizes that diseases are often multifactorial and that oxidative stress is a single component of this Oncologists cancer researchers and nutritionists are separated by divergent skills and professional disciplines that need to be bridged in order to advance preventative as well as treatment strategies While oncologists and cancer researchers may study the underlying pathogenesis of cancer they are less likely to be conversant in the science of nutrition and dietetics On the other hand nutritionists and dietitians are less conversant with the detailed clinical background and science of oncology This book addresses this gap and brings each of these disciplines to bear on the processes inherent in the oxidative stress of cancer Nutritionists can apply information related to mitochondrial oxidative stress in one disease to diet related strategies in another unrelated disease Dietitians can prescribe new foods or diets containing anti oxidants for conditions resistant to conventional pharmacological treatments Dietitians after learning about the basic biology of oxidative stress will be able to suggest new treatments to their multidisciplinary teams Nutritionists and dietitians will gain an understanding of cell signaling and be able to suggest new preventative or therapeutic strategies with anti oxidant rich foods Dietary Modulation of Cell Signaling Pathways Zigang Dong, Young-Joon Surh, 2008-09-26 A consequence of rapid progress in the science of nutrigenomics and nutrigenetics is the substantial accumulation of data covering nutritional modulation of gene expression at the cellular and subcellular levels Current research is increasingly focused on the role of nutrition and diet in modifying oxidative damage in the progression of disease Advances in Nanochemoprevention Rishi Paliwal, Shivani Rai Paliwal, 2021-01-07 This book discusses the recent progress and advances in nanochemoprevention Chemoprevention utilizes natural dietary compounds and has regained interest due to larger safety window and proven efficacy of such molecules in cancer treatments Nanotechnology has revolutionized drug delivery through passive as well as active targeting This book provides a comprehensive overview of phytochemical bioactives that are used in chemoprevention It gives a comprehensive overview of the variety of natural molecules and types of nanoparticles as well as mechanistic aspects of their superior efficacy over plain drug molecules The book concludes with summarizing the progress of pre clinical results of developed formulations for cancer treatment using nano chemoprevention

Chemical Induction of Cancer Joseph C. Arcos, Mary F. Argus, Yin-tak Woo, 2012-12-06 In the approach to the analysis of disease including of course cancer two major thrusts may be distinguished These may be referred to in shorthand as agents and processes the causative agents chemical microbial physical environmental and psychosocial and the organismic processes initiated and furthered by the agents culminating in observable pathology at the macromolecular cytological histological organ function locomotor and behavioral levels The past 25 years since the appearance of the first volume of the predecessor series 1 authored by the Editors of this present volume have seen an impressive number of studies on chemicals and other agents as etiologic factors in the induction of cancer The major emphasis has been on the discovery of many chemical carcinogens of widely different structures their metabolism by various tissues and cells and in turn their molecular biochemical effects on the cells This rapidly expanded body of information as effectively covered in the predecessor volumes is an excellent entree to the second half of the overall problem of chemical carcinogenesis the processes The active agents trigger a large array of molecular biochemical alterations to which the target cells target tissues and target organisms respond in many select and common ways This second major aspect of the induction of cancer by chemicals and by other agents the sequence of cellular and tissue changes clearly relevant to cancer remains the challenge for the future
