

NYC DOE Framework for Teaching: Danielson Rubric

	INEFFECTIVE	DEVELOPING	EFFECTIVE	HIGHLY EFFECTIVE
1.1C The teacher displays knowledge of content and pedagogy	In planning and practice, the teacher makes use of content knowledge but seems to view content as static. The teacher displays little understanding of pedagogical knowledge important to students' learning of the content. The teacher displays little content understanding of the ways of pedagogical approaches available to students' learning of the content.	The teacher is familiar with the important concepts in the discipline, but displays a lack of a systematic of how these concepts relate to each other. The teacher understands content as static, displaying little understanding, although much knowledge may be available to the teacher. The teacher's plans and practice reflect a limited range of pedagogical approaches to the discipline or to the students.	The teacher displays solid knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to one another. The teacher displays some content understanding of pedagogical approaches to help students learn. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wider range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.	The teacher displays extensive knowledge of the important concepts in the discipline and how these relate to one another and to other disciplines. The teacher demonstrates wide understanding of pedagogical approaches to help students learn and provides the link to necessary cognitive structures that must exist in order to learn. The teacher's plans and practice reflect familiarity with a wide range of effective pedagogical approaches in the discipline and the ability to anticipate student misconceptions.
1.2C The teacher understands instructional practices	Learning activities are poorly aligned with the instructional outcomes, do not follow a sequential progression, are not designed to engage students in active intellectual activity and have a monotone, low effectiveness in motivating students to take action and offer new variety.	Some of the learning activities and tasks are aligned with instructional outcomes and represent meaningful cognitive challenge, but with no different student level of involvement. Instructional groups generally support the activities, with some variety. The teacher or unit has a meaningful structure, but the progression of tasks is uneven, with only some meaningful time allocations.	Most of the learning activities are aligned with the instructional outcomes and follow a sequential progression suitable to groups of students. The learning activities have some with time allocations, they represent significant cognitive challenge, with some differentiation for different groups of students and varied use of instructional groups.	The sequence of learning activities follows a coherent argument, is aligned to instructional goals, and is designed to engage students in high-level cognitive activity. There are appropriate differentiation for individual learners. Instructional groups are varied appropriately with some opportunity for students to lead.
2.1C Creating an environment of respect and support	Relationships between interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally negative, unproductive, or leave no time for both and/or, cultural learning needs, and if available and time is. Student interactions are characterized by negative, passive, or conflict. The teacher does not deal with all inappropriate behavior.	Relationships between interactions, both between teachers and students and among students, are generally appropriate, but may reflect occasional inappropriate, disruptive, or disruptive for students' progress, culture, and development and time. Students rarely demonstrate disagreement or conflict. The teacher attempts to respond to all inappropriate behavior with some results. The majority of the time students are engaged in working together towards one goal.	Relationships between interactions are friendly and the students go on working and respect. Both learning and appropriate to the age, culture, and development needs of the students, with students among students are generally polite and respectful, and students exhibit respect for the teacher. The teacher responds successfully to disrespectful behavior among students. The majority of the time students are polite, respectful and courteous, though students may be aware when students who are taking informal roles.	Classroom interactions between the teacher and students and among students are highly respectful, reflecting genuine warmth, caring, and sensitivity to students' individuality. Students exhibit respect for the teacher and contribute to high level of civility among all students in the class. The unit is built on a foundation where all students feel valued and a respectful behavior is normative.
2.2C Managing student behavior	There appears to be inconsistent standards of conduct, or students in the classroom. There is little or no time for monitoring of students' learning or engagement to students' behavior in comparison and some potential of students' dignity.	Standards of conduct appear to have been established, but their implementation is inconsistent. The teacher tries, with some results, to monitor students' behavior and respond to students' misbehavior.	Standards of behavior are generally appropriate. The teacher monitors student behavior against established standards of conduct. Teacher response to students' behavior is consistent, proportionate, and respectful to students and is effective.	Standards of behavior are entirely appropriate. Students take an active role in monitoring their own behavior and for their efforts. Students appear to understand and act on it. Teacher monitoring of student behavior is subtle and prevention. The teacher's response to student misbehavior is sensitive to individual student needs and respects students' dignity.
