CONCEPTS FOR AUTISM Soma Mukhopadhyay, 2016-09-26 This book uses RPM techniques to teach mathematical concepts to students Mathematical concepts are separated from computational details in this book because many students with autism may not have the visual stamina to look at the details of math problems or the performance tolerance to complete multi step problems The lesson plans in this book include steps that are easy to follow Mathematics is not just for mathematicians or to complete a competence test It is an integral part in our daily lives and understanding the concepts will widen the thinking areas of an autistic individual An Exploration of the Rapid Prompting Method for Students with Autism , 2018 The Rapid Prompting Method RPM was created by Soma Mukhopadhyay as an attempt to provide a way for individuals with autism to learn and communicate The method has been said to give students with autism a means of communication A facilitator quickly provides verbal prompts to the individual who then spells out messages on a letter board or a keyboard

Very little research has been done on RPM and it is not considered an evidence based method Many professionals believe that RPM is not a valid method of communication largely due to the striking similarities it has with Facilitated Communication FC FC is another method of communication for individuals with autism that was discredited in 1993 and 1994 It involved a facilitator holding the hand or arm of an individual and helping them spell out messages It was found that the facilitators were actually authoring the messages rather than the individuals with autism The present literature review compares the two methods and discusses the research that has been done on both the Rapid Prompting Method and Facilitated Communication
