AC 1.1 - Evaluate the effectiveness of the roles of personnel involved in criminal investigations. (10 marks)

Crime scene investigators

Role:

A crime scene investigators role is to collect and preserve evidence from the crime scene. Their main responsibility is to ensure that the evidence at the scene is not contaminated as this would therefore mean it will not be admissible in court. They work together with the police to decide what evidence is vital and decide the best way in order to gather it. They photograph the crime scene as well as any surrounding areas that contain evidence, using the common approach path. Once they have obtained all the evidence, they have to pack and document everything so it is ready to be sent off for analysis by forensic specialists. In addition to this, they may also attend post mortems and give evidence in court.

Effectiveness:

Expertise- CSIs are experts in their field as they undergo thorough training and many also have a degree in a science related field. This would imply that they have a great deal of expertise as they have had the necessary training in order to carry out their role effectively.

Availability- CSIs are available 24/7 as they work on an on-call basis. This means that they could be called to a crime scene at any time of the day. This is essential as of course crimes can be committed at any time, and so it's important that crime scene investigators can arrive at the scene quickly in order to obtain evidence before it may be possibly contaminated by factors such as the weather.

Cost- Each CSI gets paid a salary, and so this will therefore incur additional costs to the investigation.

Other evaluation points:

- The samples that CSIs collect may be a hazard to their health and safety, so these risks need to be calculated and the appropriate measures taken in order to minimize the risk of harm
- The role can be taking a toll on CSI's mental wellbeing due to the nature of the scenes that they may attend to
- The weather could contaminate the crime scene
- They may be able to provide a suspect's innocence through DNA or fingerprints testing.

Case example- Amanda Knox:

- Exchange student found dead in her flat in Italy, friend Knox suspected of murder.
- Contamination of evidence, failures to document evidence, planted evidence to falsely incriminate

Strength

- CSIs may gather evidence that conclusively links suspects to crime scenes and victims
- The evidence may also prove conclusively that a suspect is in fact innocent, e.g., when their fingerprints do not match those found by the CSI at the crime scene
