

course be kept in mind that these entries are self-selecting in a lot of cases. Thus those people who have not returned their forms with details will be omitted from the listing.

The Europa Yearbook in two volumes contains wide-ranging information on various international organisations around the world — both intergovernmental and non-governmental — as well as details on the 160 odd states. International organisations and the countries from Afghanistan to Jordan are listed in Volume One and Kampuchea to Zimbabwe in Volume Two.

We are given relevant details concerning the United Nations and its agencies, the European Communities, the Organisation for African Unity, and so on. There are listings for the numerous regional institutions as well as those involved in the finance, arts, sport, etc.

For each of the countries listed there is a brief introductory survey including recent history. There are then sections on government, defence, economic affairs, education, and tourism. The statistical survey covers area and population, and the current state of industry, agriculture, fishing, finance, and external trade.

The main section for each country is the Directory which is concerned with the Constitution, the Government, Legislature, and Judicial system of each country. There are also entries for the institutions involved in publishing, radio, trade and industry, and finance among other things.

The sources drawn on for this book are national statistical offices, government departments, diplomatic missions, as well as some UN publications. This is something that must obviously be borne in mind because of the built-in bias of the statistics quoted. Also, while the attempt is made to standardise the information, it must be remembered that the diverse sources make this a difficult task. Nonetheless this book will be invaluable as initial reference material — Millennium has had cause to refer to it now and again — and would seem to be a requisite for every self-respecting academic library.

DAVID LONG

David Long is a research student in the Department of International Relations at the London School of Economics.

Kjell Goldmann, Sten Berglund and Gunnar Sjöstedt, Democracy and Foreign Policy: The case of Sweden (Aldershot: Gower, 1986, 206pp, £19.50).

It is often asserted that democracy and foreign policy cannot be combined, that they are incompatible. This idea is supported from a variety of political perspectives. There are those who, echoing Schumpeter, contend that the remoteness of foreign policy from the everyday life of citizens means that voters are capable of adopting only irrational or blinkered preferences. There are others, on the Left, who see the prime determinants of foreign policy as lying well beyond the control of individuals or nation-states. There are, as the authors point out, many other arguments for the view that democracy is ill-equipped to manage foreign policy. While this contention is widely held, it is rarely examined in detail. This is the great strength of Democracy and Foreign Policy.

Underdal, 2012-12-06 Many of the major environmental challenges facing governments and societies today are collective problems calling for joint solutions However even when effective solutions can be found only through joint efforts international cooperation is often hard to establish and maintain This makes it all the more important to understand the conditions for success and the causes of failure This book examines some of the political mechanisms at work in the formation and operation of international environmental regimes What are the major factors that shape the national positions that governments bring to the negotiating table How do the international institutions and negotiation processes through which these preferences and positions are adjusted and aggregated affect outcomes What are the main mechanisms determining whether or not international environmental agreements are successfully implemented at the domestic level The Politics of International Environmental Management is published in cooperation with the European Science Foundation

The Role of the Nation-State in the 21st Century: Human Rights, International Organisations and Foreign Policy Monique Castermans-Holleman, Fried van Hoof, Jacqueline Smith, 2023-09-20 This collection of essays contributed by his friends pays tribute to the work of Peter R Baehr whose impressive career spans some 40 years of activity devoted to the cause of human rights Although human rights remains the leitmotiv of Professor Baehr's career the themes explored in this collection the role of the nation state in the 21st century international organisations and foreign policy are a reflection of the versatility of his work and the range of his interests This volume thus offers the reader a stimulating collection of essays by a wide range of international experts on both the theory and the practice of human rights within the context of the nation state of the 21st century

State, 1988

The Logic of Internationalism Kjell Goldmann, 2002-11-01 Internationalism is the view that institution building and peaceful cooperation will make peace and security prevail in a system of independent states This book examines this controversial topic and discusses whether such a view is realistic or whether international relations are typically characterised by tension and war Kjell Goldmann seeks to examine the plausibility of internationalism under present day conditions A theory of internationalism is outlined and is shown to have two dimensions one coercive to enforce the rules and decisions of international institutions and one accommodative to avoid confrontation by means of mutual understanding and compromise Problematic features of the theory are then considered in detail the assumption that all international cooperation tends to inhibit war and the tension inherent in the joint pursuit of coercion and accommodation

National and European Foreign Policies Reuben Wong, Christopher Hill, 2012-04-27 National and European Foreign Policy explores the processes of interaction between the national and the European levels in foreign policy making in European Union states The volume also assesses the mutual influence which the Member States exert on each other independent of the EU institutions thus tracing the extent to which Member State foreign policies are being Europeanized into more convergent coordinated policies. With chapters examining France, Germany, Italy, UK, Denmark, Greece, Spain, Finland, Poland, and Slovenia, the overarching questions the volume addresses centre on the nature of the relationship between the foreign policies of the Member States and European foreign policy. Engaging with Europeanization with theoretical rigour, the contributors to this volume examine the EU's impact on the foreign policies of Member States, old and new; the impact of the Member States on the EU's external relations; and the influence of the Member States on each other's foreign policies. Providing interesting detail on changes in foreign policy thinking and national policies using the concept of Europeanization, National and European Foreign Policy will be of interest to students and scholars of European politics and policy formation, foreign policy and International Relations.
