THE TYPES 825 TO 827 H
ARE ON THE SAME LINES

OUTSTANDING FEATURES OF "DEMOOR" HEAVY BOXED-BED LATHES, types 824 - 825 - 826 - 827 - 827 H-100

The main spindle of such heavy lathes revolves in three strong bearings, of which two of centrifugal bronze, with taper adjustment as on grinding machines, reinforced by a third intermediate roller bearing.

The bed is a robust box casting, no legs, like that of the largest lathes. This characteristic is not generally found in other constructions of the same size. Likewise, the cut through the bed (illustration hereabove) shows an extra reinforcement by means of the "double wall" system. This design of the bed of the heavy duty DEMOOR lathes ensures an absolute capacity of resistance to any deflecting or torsional efforts. By arranging the foundation in a suitable manner, as recommended by the maker, it is possible to recuperate the coolant like in the case of the suds-tray on small and medium size lathes and create a settling tank where the coolant can be filtered.

The set of carriage is completed by an intermediate slide, for easier adjustment by hand of the tool-holder both longitudinally and in cross motion.
