Interviews in Qualitative Research Nigel King, Christine Horrocks, 2010-02-25 Interviewing is used very widely in qualitative research and takes many different forms. The qualitative interview is also a method that is constantly evolving in response both to theoretical and technological developments. King and Horrocks present a clear and thorough guide to the use of interviews in contemporary qualitative research. Writing in an accessible style with many practical examples, the authors explore the key debates in the philosophy and theory underlying interview methods. How to design and carry out interviews. The special requirements of group and remote telephone and online interviewing. The central issues of reflexivity and ethics. The book also features a chapter which introduces the principles and practice of the thematic analysis of interview data and the book concludes with a detailed consideration of the use of interviews in two major qualitative research traditions: phenomenological and narrative approaches. Interviews in Qualitative Research is a must-have text for students and researchers planning to use interview methods for themselves. It is aimed at a broad range of disciplines with examples drawn from across the social, educational and health sciences.

Innovation Exposed Sarah Schoellhammer, 2020-02-05 Collectively led companies are considered more flexible, faster and more innovative. But how are innovations developed in heterarchical, that is non-hierarchical or agile organizations? What can we learn for classical innovation management and organizations? In a multiple case study approach, Sarah Schoellhammer describes the innovation practices of one small, two medium-sized and two large distinctive European heterarchies from different industries. Their non-hierarchical innovation mechanisms are analyzed across the five cases and compared to classic innovation management along the dimensions strategy and direction, structures and processes as well as culture and leadership. The author develops a model on innovation in heterarchies being exposed rather than sheltered and describes implications for practitioners of innovation and organization in more classic organizations on the individual, project team and organizational level.
