The Use of Psychological Testing for Treatment Planning and Outcomes Assessment Mark E.

Maruish, 2014-04-08 Test based psychological assessment has been significantly affected by the health care revolution in the United States during the past two decades. Despite new limitations on psychological services across the board and psychological testing in particular, it continues to offer a rapid and efficient method of identifying problems, planning and monitoring a course of treatment, and assessing the outcomes of interventions. This thoroughly revised and greatly expanded third edition of a classic reference, now three volumes, constitutes an invaluable resource for practitioners who in a managed care era need to focus their testing not on the general goals of personality assessment, symptom identification, and diagnosis, so often presented to them as students and trainees, but on specific questions: What course of treatment should this person receive? How is it going? Was it effective? New chapters describe new tests and models and new concerns such as ethical aspects of outcomes assessment. Volume I reviews general issues and recommendations concerning the use of psychological testing for screening for psychological disturbances, planning and monitoring appropriate interventions, and the assessing outcomes, and offers specific guidelines for selecting instruments. It also considers more specific issues such as the analysis of group and individual patient data, the selection and implementation of outcomes instrumentation, and the ethics of gathering and using outcomes data. Volume II discusses psychological measures developed for use with younger children and adolescents that can be used for the purposes outlined in Volume I. Volume III, those developed for use with adults. Drawing on the knowledge and experience of a diverse group of leading experts, test developers, researchers, clinicians, and others, the third edition of The Use of Psychological Testing for Treatment Planning and Outcomes Assessment provides vital assistance to all clinicians and to their trainees and graduate students. Essentials of Corrections G. Larry Mays, L. Thomas Winfree, Jr., 2013-11-19

The fifth edition of this leading essentials textbook on corrections has been fully revised and updated to include new international comparative data and a fresh chapter on prison inmates with special needs. Unrivalled in scope, it offers undergraduates a concise but comprehensive introduction to the subject. Includes textual materials and assignments formulated to encourage students' critical thinking skills. Chapters feature text boxes on key points of correctional theory and on international correctional practice. Presented in full color throughout, including extensive photos and graphics. Includes stand-alone chapters on careers in corrections, gender and ethnicity issues, and likely future developments in corrections. Features invaluable historical context on the evolution of correctional theory and practice. Offers a new comprehensive online Student Study Guide and thoroughly updated and expanded ancillary materials. The Role of Temperament in Psychotherapy Jane Lucille Spies-Wert, 1998 The present study investigated the role of temperament in psychotherapy. While there has been considerable interest in naturally occurring stability and change in temperament across the life span, for the most part authors have taken no position on whether temperament can be altered through planned intervention. The sample for the present study consisted of psychotherapy outpatients who were administered self reports questionnaires EAS Temperament Survey Mental Health Index throughout treatment as part of an extensive six year research project on long term psychotherapy Howard et al 1991 Study results may be summarized by three main points First results suggest evidence for both temperamental stability and change Findings varied when individual rather than group data were considered and when success rather than failure treatment cases were reviewed Second data from the present study support the possibility that while the EAS Temperament Survey was designed as a measure of traits only two scales Activity and Sociability appear to be stable and reliable indicators of underlying characteristics Scores on the negative emotionality scales Distress Fearfulness Anger appear to reflect clinical state Third there is strong evidence in the present study to support that temperament predicts patient response to treatment Distress predicts rate of change in treatment while Sociability and Activity predict the overall amount of change in treatment Finally methodological revision in both measure distribution and design may help to direct interesting and valuable research for the future Dissertation Abstracts International ,2000
