Corporate Governance, Capital Markets, and Capital Budgeting Baliira Kalyebara, Sardar M. N. Islam, 2013-07-31 The primary contribution of this book is to integrate the important disciplines which simultaneously impact the investment appraisal process. The book presents a study that develops a new approach to investment appraisal which uses a multiple objective linear programming MOLP model to integrate the selected disciplines which include capital markets, corporate governance and capital budgeting. The research covers two case studies: one in the e-commerce sector and another in the airline industry in which the above disciplines are integrated. Readers from the areas of corporate governance, regulation and accounting would find the survey of different approaches and the new integrated optimization approach particularly useful.

The Analysis of Factors Influencing Leverage of Tanzanian Companies Lucky Yona, 2018-08-17 The dominant capital structure studies across the globe have been concentrated in developed countries and specifically for listed companies and few on unlisted companies or mixed companies. This thesis aims to examine the extent to which company liquidity, profitability, tangibility and company size influence the leverage of Tanzanian companies as suggested by pecking order and trade off theory. The study findings show a negative relationship between company liquidity and company leverage as measured by debt ratio and debt to equity ratio. These findings show the validity of the pecking order theory in Tanzania.

The postulates of the trade off theory as far as liquidity is concerned are not valid. The study findings also reveal a positive relationship between profitability and leverage suggesting that majority of Tanzanian companies used more debts as the means of financing their business operations despite their profitability. The study also found that the tangibility of listed companies was higher than that of the unlisted companies and that there was a negative relationship between tangibility and leverage which is valid to pecking order but contrary to trade off theory. As far as company size is concerned, study findings suggest that pecking order theory (POT) and trade off theory (TOT) relevance cannot be fully supported in Tanzanian companies as the findings have revealed a negative relationship between company size and leverage. Findings reveal a negative relationship between company size and leverage. Pecking order theory (POT) and trade off theory (TOT) relevance cannot be fully supported in Tanzanian companies and size of listed companies was higher than that of the unlisted companies. This suggests that the size of majority of Tanzanian unlisted companies is still small as compared to the listed companies. Data

Science for Financial Econometrics Nguyen Ngoc Thach, Vladik Kreinovich, Nguyen Duc Trung, 2020-11-13. This book offers an overview of state of the art econometric techniques with a special emphasis on financial econometrics. There is a major need for such techniques since the traditional way of designing mathematical models based on researchers' insights can no longer keep pace with the ever increasing data flow. To catch up many application areas have begun relying on data science i.e. on techniques for extracting models from data such as data mining, machine learning and innovative statistics. In terms of capitalizing on data science many application areas are way ahead of economics. To close this gap the book provides examples of how data science techniques can be used in economics. Corresponding techniques range from almost traditional statistics to promising novel ideas such as quantum econometrics. Given its scope the book will appeal to students and researchers interested in state of the art developments and to practitioners interested in using data science techniques.
