

China's Foreign Policy Challenges and Evolving Strategy

Abanti Bhattacharya

Abstract

The end of the Cold War, the September 11 terrorists' attacks, preponderance of US power and globalisation have shaped the present world order and posed new opportunities and challenges for China. China's need to fulfill its grand strategy of acquiring comprehensive national power within this external environment and overcome the existing challenges has given rise to its post-Cold War foreign policy strategy. Given the challenges it faces, its primary need is to ensure continuance of a peaceful environment to sustain its reform and modernisation programme. This calls for a foreign policy, which conforms to rather than challenges the existing international order. Yet its policies to advance national interests are already leading to a series of complex responses in both Asia and the Pacific regions.

The end of bipolar politics of the Cold War, on the one hand, created a peaceful environment for China's growth; the forces of globalisation, on the other enhanced its need to open up and integrate with the world economy. Both the factors reshaped China's foreign policy strategy and national interests. During the Cold War China's primary challenge was to ensure its security from the threats emanating from the US and later the Soviet Union. Therefore, national sovereignty and territorial integrity were the essential goals of Chinese foreign policy. In the post-Cold War period, China's national interests, in addition to essential foreign policy goals, have been determined by the dream of achieving a 'great power status'. This dream of 'great power status' initiated since 1979 is engineered by a grand strategy known as the four modernisation programmes. This has resulted in spiraling economic development and growing military might. Yet the Chinese leadership feels that it is not even halfway through in attaining its grand strategy. There are numerous and complex challenges to the Chinese

Report to Congress of the U.S.-China Economic and Security Review Commission U.S.-China Economic and Security Review Commission,2011 China's Foreign Policies Today Axel Berkofsky, Giulia Sciorati,2022-05-25 Since Xi Jinping took power in 2012 China s foreign policy has significantly shifted from a defensive to an assertive approach For decades Beijing worked to integrate into the liberal international order presenting itself as a peacefully rising power By contrast however under Xi s leadership the country is attempting to create a global system that is more favourable to its own interests The Report examines China s current foreign policy approach and the drivers behind the country s shift away from tradition What are the main features of China s foreign policy today How are decisions being taken and to what extent do interest groups continue to have a say in decision making after the recent power centralisation China's Foreign Policy U.s.-china Economic and Security Review Commission,2011-04-13 As Beijing flexes its muscles it has strong new tools to employ including increased economic leverage especially in light of the global financial crisis Both developing and developed countries welcome Chinese trade investment and economic aid Europe is actively pursuing Chinese assistance for addressing its sovereign debt crisis And countries from Suriname to Kenya to Tonga are recipients of the fruits of China s growing economic power So too are a number of countries of concern Yet Beijing s open arms and deep pockets raise concerns in many countries For example some in the developing world see Beijing s investment as a new form of colonialism while many struggle with displacement of domestic production by Chinese goods The acquisition of resources is clearly guiding much Chinese investment but what else will the Chinese government expect in return for its generous terms and large investments

Challenges to Chinese Foreign Policy Yufan Hao,C.X. George Wei,Lowell Dittmer,2021-12-15 When Beijing hosted the 2008 Summer Olympics China symbolically asserted its role as an emerging world power a position it is not likely to relinquish anytime soon China s growing economy military reforms and staggering productivity have contributed to its ascendancy as a major player in international affairs Western scholars have attempted to explain Chinese foreign policy using historical or theoretical evidence but until this volume few studies from a Chinese perspective have been published in English In Challenges to Chinese Foreign Policy Diplomacy Globalization and the Next World Power editors Yufan Hao C X George Wei and Lowell Dittmer reveal how Chinese scholars view their nation s rise to global dominance Drawing from a wealth of foreign relations experts including scholars native to the region this volume examines the unique challenges China faces as it adapts in its role as a world leader and it analyzes how China s evolving international relationships are shaping the global landscape of the twenty first century China and the United Nations Janka Oertel,2015-03-26 This comprehensive and innovative book examines and explains the development of the relationship between China and the United Nations in the first decade of the twenty first century Using historical research and contemporary case studies the book stresses the importance of domestic determinants of UN policy and concludes that the chances for international actors to significantly influence

Chinese UN policy making remain very limited New Frontiers in China's Foreign Relations Allen Carlson, Ren Xiao, 2011-10-14 This book stands as a rebuke to any who would attempt to forward simplistic interpretations of China's rise. In place of parsimonious arguments or an endorsement of any singular set of images whether pacific or confrontational it repeatedly calls attention to the remarkable complexity of China's emerging international profile. More specifically the leading Chinese and American scholars working in the fields of Chinese foreign policy international political economy and national security who contributed to this volume argue that while China appears to be entering a new era in its relationship with the outside world such a development encompasses disparate even contradictory policies and as a result there is a great deal of fluidity within China's place in world politics The Internet, Social Media, and a Changing China Jacques deLisle, Avery Goldstein, Guobin Yang, 2016-04-05 The Internet and social media are pervasive and transformative forces in contemporary China. The Internet Social Media and a Changing China explores the changing relationship between China's Internet and social media and its society politics legal system and foreign relations Construction of Chinese Nationalism in the Early 21st Century Suisheng Zhao, 2014-07-25 Chinese nationalism is powered by a narrative of China's century of shame and humiliation in the hands of imperialist powers and calls for the Chinese government to redeem the past humiliations and take back all lost territories. The continuing surge of Chinese nationalism in the early 21st century therefore has fed a roiling sense of anxiety in many political capitals about whether a virulent nationalism has emerged to make China's rise anything but peaceful. This book addresses this anxiety by examining the domestic sources and foreign policy implications of Chinese nationalism in the early 21st century. It is divided into three parts. Part I is an overview of the scholarly debate about if the rise of Chinese nationalism has driven China's foreign policy in a more irrational and inflexible direction in the first one and half decades of the 21st century. Part II analyzes the construction of Chinese nationalism by a variety of domestic forces including the communist state the angry youth fen qing liberal intellectuals and ethnic groups. Part III explores whether Chinese nationalism is affirmative assertive or aggressive through the case studies of China's maritime territorial disputes with Japan in the East China Sea and with several Southeast Asian countries in the South China Sea the border controversy over the ancient Koguryo with Korea and the cross Taiwan Strait relations. This book was based on articles published in the Journal of Contemporary China China in the Global Economy The Agro-food Processing Sector in China Developments and Policy Challenges OECD, 2000-01-20 This conference proceedings examines questions revolving around changes in and challenges for China's agro processing sector "Not an idea we have to shun" Christopher D. Yung, 2021-05-03 China's expanding international economic interests are likely to generate increasing demands for its navy the People's Liberation Army Navy PLAN to operate out of area to protect Chinese citizens' investments and sea lines of communication. The frequency intensity type and location of such operations will determine the associated logistics support requirements with distance from China size and duration and combat intensity being especially important drivers. How will the PLAN employ overseas bases and facilities to support these expanding operational requirements The assessment in this book is based on Chinese writings comments by Chinese military officers and analysts observations of PLAN operational patterns analysis of the overseas military logistics models other countries have employed and interviews with military logisticians China s rapidly expanding international interests are likely to produce a parallel expansion of PLAN operations which would make the current PLAN tactic exclusive reliance on commercial port access untenable due to cost and capacity factors This would certainly be true if China contemplated engaging in higher intensity combat operations This book considers six logistics models that might support expanded PLAN overseas operations the Pit Stop Model Lean Colonial Model Dual Use Logistics Facility String of Pearls Model Warehouse Model and Model USA Each model is analyzed in terms of its ability to support likely future naval missions to advance China s expanding overseas economic political and security interests and in light of longstanding Chinese foreign policy principles
