1. Matched Reading Questions

1. What is the relationship of the 1920s to the 1930s in the history of American cinema?

The 1920s marked the beginning of the motion picture industry in the United States. During this decade, the film industry grew rapidly, and the number of films produced increased. The 1930s, on the other hand, were marked by the Great Depression, which led to a decline in the number of films produced. However, the quality of the films improved, and the industry began to focus on producing more serious and socially relevant films. The 1930s also saw the rise of the Hollywood studio system, which became the dominant force in the American film industry.
