China And The European Union In Africa:

China and the European Union in Africa Jing Men, Benjamin Barton, 2011 This book intelligently weaves together China and the EU's policy in Africa and the impact of this interaction on Africa's future A much needed insight into how the interaction between the three holds the key to solving one of the world's most challenging issues The EU and China's Engagement in Africa Lirong Liu, Dr. Lirong Liu, 2011 Introduction 1 Clashing norms between the EU and China in Africa 2 The conflict of interests between the EU and China in Africa 3 Trilateral dialogue bilateral cooperation or unilateral socialisation 4 The dilemma of socialisation Conclusion Annex China and the European Union in Africa Jing Men, Benjamin Barton, 2011 China and the European Union in Africa Benjamin Barton, 2016-05-23 China's rise on the international scene over the past few years has correlated with its exponential economic growth The European Union EU the world's largest development aid provider has been feeling the heat of Beijing's closer ties with Africa As a result the EU's overall policy making towards Africa has suffered from a loss of credibility and this has been further exposed both by the success of China's investments in Africa and by the favourable response that China's investment proposals have received from African leaders Dividing the book into five parts the editors and an outstanding line up of Chinese and European contributors guide the reader through the complexities of China's rising influence in Africa but they also analyse if and how the EU should adapt to this China and the EU in the Horn of Africa Anica-Elena Ursu, Willem van den Berg, 2018 The Horn of Africa is one of the most geo strategically important regions of the world and one of the main theatres in which the Sino African four pronged approach based on economic ideological political and security interests unfolds This policy brief unpacks the dynamics of Chinese engagement with the Horn of Africa with Ethiopia as a case study The brief maintains the view that although European Union EU and Chinese activities in the Horn of Africa often differ in ideological and political interests there is significant complementarity in economic and security interests It also suggests that by making a balanced assessment of China's activities in the region and by understanding where the two agendas diverge and where they are complementary the EU could work with China to strengthen stability in the region The brief will conclude with recommendations for EU policy makers and private sector actors who seek further engagement with the Horn The European Union in Africa Maurizio Carbone, 2015-11-01 The European Union in Africa Incoherent policies asymmetrical partnership declining relevance provides a comprehensive analysis of EU Africa relations since the beginning of the twenty first century and includes contributions from leading experts in the field of EU external relations It seeks to explain how the relationship evolved through discussion of a number of different policies and agreements ranging from established areas such as aid agriculture trade and security to new areas such as migration climate change energy and social policies This book successfully challenges a number of widely held assumptions on the role of the EU in Africa and at the same time sheds light on the role and identity of the EU in the international arena It will be of great interest to students and scholars in the field of EU external relations as well as practitioners of international development EU-China-Africa Trilateral Relations in a Multipolar World Anna Katharina Stahl, 2017-10-25 This book considers the effect of China's unprecedented economic growth and more prominent geopolitical role in the twenty first century. Rising powers considerably alter international relations leading to the emergence of a multipolar world order that impacts more traditional international players like the European Union. EU China's growing economic and diplomatic influence is particularly relevant in Africa where it presents an alternative to conventional North-South relations and proposes a new type of South-South partnership. Stahl examines the EU's foreign policy response regarding China's growing presence in Africa as well as the EU's attempts to refocus attention on the African continent. Drawing on a rich body of evidence collected through fieldwork in China and Africa and extensive expert interviews, the author sheds light on the novel trend of EU-China-Africa trilateral relations. The book offers a new analytical framework for the study of the EU's foreign policy of engagement with emerging powers and will appeal to graduate students and scholars interested in the EU's international role, international relations and development as well as contemporary Chinese and African studies.

Political Trust and the Politics of Security Engagement Benjamin Barton, 2017-09-13 The EU and China are often characterised as parties whose bilateral political differences still remain too large to bridge so that they have failed to convert rhetorical promises into tangible results of cooperation, particularly with regards to the field of international security. Yet in terms of their bilateral interaction on security risk management in Africa, EU and Chinese naval officers jointly brought down the number of successful Somali pirate attacks in the Gulf of Aden and to a lesser extent were jointly involved in seeking a resolution to the lingering conflict in Darfur. This book asks how we can make sense as a whole of this relatively sudden shift in regards to the dealings between their respective officials on the topic of security risk management. It argues that the outcomes of Sino-European bilateral dealings on this topic are above all determined by the ability/inability of these officials to build political trust as a complex and cognitive social phenomenon. Consequently, the book applies an innovative conceptual framework on political trust to explain why EU and Chinese officials bridged their endemic political differences to practically cooperate on Somali piracy but were unable to do so when it came to their interaction on Darfur. To conclude, it examines the longer term impact of this bilateral trust building process by covering more recent examples of bilateral engagement in Libya and Mali and aims to show that although this trust building process may be case specific, ramifications may go beyond the realm of their bilateral dealings on security matters in Africa to impact wider issues of international security. This text will be of key interest to scholars and students of African and Chinese politics, EU politics, security and maritime studies and more broadly of international relations and to governmental actors.

China, the European Union, and the International Politics of Global Governance Jianwei Wang, Weiqing Song, 2016-04-29 Two major themes in contemporary international relations, Sino-European relations and global governance, are both addressed in this volume. In its focused analysis of Sino-European relations, global governance serves as both a topic for analysis and a conceptual framework to join together individual chapters Featuring perspectives from a diverse group of established and promising young scholars from China Europe and elsewhere this book has important implications for Chinese foreign policy the European Union the future of global governance and international relations at large

The European Union and China Thomas Christiansen, Emil Kirchner, Uwe Wissenbach, 2018-12-12 This accessible text offers a comprehensive analysis of the European Union EU China relationship as one of the most important in global politics today Both are major players on the world stage accounting for 30% of trade and nearly a quarter of the world's population This text shows how despite many differences in political systems and values China and the EU have developed such a close regular set of interactions at multiple levels from political strategic to economic and individual The authors start with an historical overview of the domestic politics and foreign policy apparatus of each partner to show the context in which external relations are devised From this foundation each key dimension of the relationship is analysed from trade and monetary policy security culture and society The authors show the relative merits of different theoretical perspectives and outline what is next for this complex ever changing relationship At every step the success of each partner in persuading the other of changing their positions for key strategic interests is explored What emerges is a multifaceted picture of relations between two sides that are fundamentally different kinds of actors in the international system yet have many mutual interests and a common stake in the stability of global governance The first major text to offer an accessible introduction to the multifaceted nature of EU China relations this book is an ideal companion for upper undergraduate and postgraduate students on Politics International Relations and European Studies courses
