Coming of Age in Academe Jane Roland Martin, 2013-10-28 First Published in 2000 At what price entry Philosopher of education Jane Roland Martin contends that feminist scholars have traded in their idealism for a place in the academy In Coming of Age in Academe she looks at the ways that academic feminists have become estranged from women Determining that this is the membership fee the academy exacts on all its members she calls for the academy s transformation Part one explores the chilly research climate for feminist scholars the academic traps of essentialism and aerial distance and the education gap in the feminist text In part two Martin likens the behavior of present day feminist scholars to nineteenth century immigrants to the United States and examines their assimilation into the world of work politics and the professions She finds that when you look at higher education you see what a brutal filter of women it is Part three highlights the academy s brain drain and its containment of women and then proposes actions both great and small that aim at fundamental change In this rousing call to action Martin concludes that the dissociation from women that the academy demands its entrance fee can only be stopped by radically reforming the gendered system on which the academy is based

Coming of Age in Academe Jane Roland Martin, 2000 First Published in 2000 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Gendered Futures in Higher Education Becky Ropers-Huilman, 2012-02-01 This volume addresses the ways in which gender takes shape in and is shaped by higher education environments Focusing on historical knowledge and contemporary experience the contributors identify several key gender issues affecting students faculty and leaders in higher education They examine such diverse topics as what lessons women s colleges have to offer violence on campus women faculty and part time employment and intersecting identities of race and gender and they apply critical perspectives to suggest needed change While they may not agree on the necessary strategies to improve higher education environments they do agree that those environments are currently deeply and problematically gendered

Staging Women's Lives in Academia Michelle A. Massé, Nan Bauer-Maglin, 2017-01-12 Staging Women s Lives in Academia demonstrates how ostensibly personal decisions are shaped by institutions and advocates for ways that workplaces not women must be changed Addressing life stages ranging from graduate school through retirement these essays represent a gamut of institutions and women who draw upon both personal experience and scholarly expertise The contributors contemplate the slipperiness of the very categories we construct to explain the stages of life and ask key questions such as what does it mean to be a graduate student at fifty Or a full professor at thirty five The book explores the ways women in all stages of academia feel that they are always too young or too old too attentive to work or too overly focused on family By including the voices of those who leave as well as those who stay this collection signals the need to rebuild the house of academia so that women can have not only classrooms of their own but also lives of their own

Pedagogy, Praxis and Purpose in Education C.M. Mulcahy, D.E. Mulcahy, D.G. Mulcahy, 2014-12-05 Recent years have shown the growth of federal legislation and programs having a profound impact on educational policy and practice and a decline in reliance on broadly based educational justifications. Paralleling this development has been the emergence of well endowed and influential private foundations and an increase in corporate influence in shaping policy. In this volume the authors consider the discourse rhetoric and underlying values that sustain these developments alongside those that underlie more longstanding and competing educational theories and practices. This volume highlights the importance of recognizing opposing conceptualizations of education some more educationally productive than others and their core values approaches to student learning strengths and weaknesses and justification. The authors analyze and critique what Jane Roland Martin has referred to as the deep structure of educational thought and seek improved educational policy and practice with particular reference to curriculum and pedagogy. It features a comparative analysis of competing discourses including autocratic control limited personal development and praxis.

The Educated Person D. G. Mulcahy, 2008-03-27 Liberal education has long been a fascination for scholars in a variety of disciplines and is closely associated with the idea of the educated person. Seen at one time as a matter for colleges and universities over the years it has become central to the debate surrounding general education in high school and even the earlier grades. Yet so many and varied are the uses of the term liberal education that the question arises of whether and how the idea is any longer a useful or helpful construct. In what way might it speak helpfully to educational challenges we face today? In what ways does it still speak helpfully to educational challenges we face today? In what ways might it be a guide as we search for a better way forward? These are the central questions that are addressed in this book. In doing so the positions of three theorists John Henry Newman Mortimer J. Adler and Jane Roland Martin who have written about liberal education in a compelling way and from different perspectives are selected for close analysis. The analysis is built upon to fashion a new ideal of the educated person and a new theory of liberal education.

Leading the Way Mary K. Trigg, 2010 Leading the Way is a collection of personal essays written by twenty one young hopeful American women who describe their work activism leadership and efforts to change the world. It responds to critical portrayals of this generation of twenty somethings as being disengaged and apathetic about politics social problems and civic causes. Bringing together graduates of a women's leadership certificate program at Rutgers University's Institute for Women's Leadership these essays provide a contrasting picture to assumptions about the current death of feminism the rise of selfishness and individualism and the disaffected Millennium Generation. Reflecting on a critical juncture in their lives the years during college and the beginning of careers or graduate studies the contributors' voices demonstrate the ways that diverse young educated women in the United States are embodying and formulating new models of leadership at the same time as they are finding their own professional paths ways of being and places in the world. They reflect on controversial issues such as gay marriage gender racial profiling war immigration poverty urban education and health care reform in a post 9/11 era. Leading the Way introduces readers to young women who are being prepared and empowered to assume leadership roles with men in all public arenas and to accept equal responsibility for making positive social change in the twenty first century      Learning to Flourish Daniel R. DeNicola, 2012-08-02 What is a liberal arts education How does it differ from other forms of learning What are we to make of the debates that surround it What are its place its value and its prospects in the contemporary world These are questions that trouble students and their parents educators critics and policy makers and philosophers of education among others Learning to Flourish offers a lucid penetrating philosophical exploration of liberal learning a still evolving tradition of theory and practice that has dominated and sustained intellectual life and learning in much of the globe for two millennia This study will be of interest to anyone seeking to understand liberal arts education as well as to educators and philosophers of education Daniel R DeNicola weighs the views of both advocates and critics of the liberal arts and interprets liberal education as a vital tradition aimed supremely at understanding and living a flourishing life He elaborates the tradition as expressed in five competing but complementary paradigms that transcend theories of curriculum and pedagogy and are manifested in particular social contexts He examines the transformative power of liberal education and its relation to such values as freedom autonomy and democracy reflecting on the importance of intrinsic value and moral understanding Finally DeNicola considers age old obstacles and current threats to liberal education ultimately asserting its value for and urgent need in a global pluralistic technologically advanced society The result is a bold yet nuanced theory alert to both historical and contemporary discussions and a significant contribution to the discourse on liberal education      Troubling Women's Studies Ann Braithwaite, 2004 The four essays in this collection present a multifaceted conversation about what is at stake in passing on the institutionalized project of Women s Studies at this historic moment The authors come to this conversation from a diversity of histories commitments and investments in Women s Studies Framed by the argument that Women s Studies is a project fraught with uncertainty the authors explore what it means to live within this uncertainty and how one might respond to it intellectually emotionally politically institutionally and pedagogically In exploring their own responses and taking into consideration responses from other feminist intellectuals the authors subject their practices to the same kind of academic critique to which they subject the discipline its location theories methods and pedagogies The purpose of these essays is not to enact these responses nor to fix a firm direction for the future of the discipline but rather by looking back and attending to the now inspire us to grapple with what might be possible      Women in Higher Education Ana M. Martínez Alemán, Kristen A. Renn, 2002-12-13 The only comprehensive encyclopedia on the subject of women in higher education America s first wave of feminists Susan B Anthony Elizabeth Cady Stanton and others included expanded opportunities for higher education in their Declaration of Sentiments at the first Women s Rights Convention in Seneca Falls New York in 1848 By then the first American institutions to educate women had been founded among them Mt Holyoke Seminary in 1837 However not until after the Civil War did most universities admit women and not for egalitarian purposes War casualties had caused a drop in enrollment and the states needed teachers Women students paid tuition but as teachers were paid salaries half that of men By the late 20th century there were more female than male students of higher education but women remained underrepresented at the higher levels of educational leadership and training This volume covers everything from historical and cultural context and gender theory to women in the curriculum and as faculty and administrators
