BODY

CONSTRUCTION

The bodies for the Master "85" and Master DeLuxe passenger cars are completely new and meet fully the demands for beauty, roominess, greater headroom, increased visibility, light weight, strength and all around safety.

These bodies are of all steel construction welded into one complete unit.

The complete floor pan assembly is welded to and reinforced with steel cross bows which are spot-welded to the underside of the floor. Each pan is indented and grooved to give additional strength. Body bolt holes are also reinforced.

The body front end assembly (commonly called the cowl and dash assembly), consists of two main units electrically welded together.

1. The FRONT END FRAME.
2. The FRONT END OUTER SHELL.

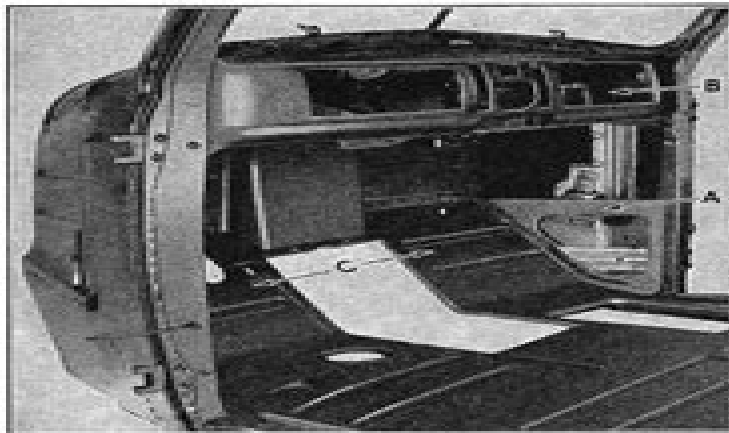

Fig. 1—Cowl and Dash Assembly

The front end frame assembly is comprised of the upper and lower section of the front body hinge pillars, the windshield header, and the instrument panel. These parts, together with reinforcements are electrically spot-welded together to form the windshield opening—also a foundation frame work to which the front end outer shell is assembled and welded. To further strengthen this inner frame, additional reinforcements are used as follows (Fig. 1):

- A. Front end side brace—right and left.
- B. Front end frame to dash panel brace—right and left.
- C. Toe pans—right and left.

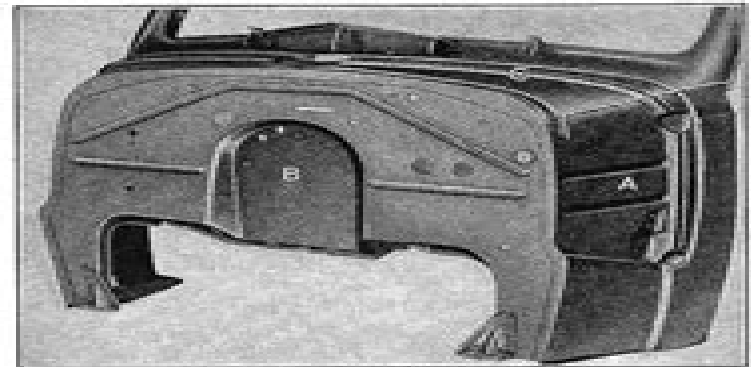

Fig. 2—Front End Outer Panel

The front end outer panel is comprised of four major panels (Fig. 2):

- A. Cowl side panels—right and left.
- B. Dash panel.
- C. Cowl upper panel. The top center of this panel is stamped out and a drain gutter and hinge bracket are spot-welded to the underside of this opening to accommodate the cowl ventilator assembly.
